Self Assessment on Intended Learning Outcomes of Each Session

Students received a self-assessment tool via email after they had completed a series of lesson (usually one or two) of the same theme. They were provided with the intended learning outcomes of the lesson(s) for self-reflecting the level of achievements that they should be able to achieve by a 4-point scale. The overall self-reflection of outcomes will be discussed and followed up by the teacher to reinforce and strengthen learning of specific parts.

The purpose of the exercise is to engage learners in on-going ways, to build a closer connection with the course content, so that they will develop sense of belongings to the study of the course, it also helps them develop meaning to what they have learnt in the course. Hopefully, participants will be more motivated and engaged to learn, and set goals and take action in managing their study in the course.

How did students use self-assessment tool?

They received an email with a link and then they logged in to fill out the questionnaire.
